Joe Clementicz, Who Stabbed a Brother Austrian Arrested.

HIDING FOR FOUR WEEKS

Mehilitz, Who Was Stabbed in the Abdomen, Has Been Treated at the Hospital Every Third Day Since the Murderous Assault.

Joe Clementicz, the Austrian for whom the authorities have been searching during the past few weeks. was arrested yesterday morning about 9 o'clock at his lodging house on East Third street near Ash street by Under Sheriff Daly and Deputy Sheriffs Pickle and McGuinness.

Clementicz is charged with assault in the second degree upon the person of John Mehilitz. He stabbed Mehilitz in the dance hall of a lodging house on East Commercial avenue opposite the Lyceum hall. The stabbing was the final windup of a prolonged celebration in honor of a wedding which took place in the lodging house. The party had danced all night after the marriage, all the next day and until 2 o'clock the next morning, when the dancers began to grow tired. Mehilitz lay down on a bench to take a sleep, when clementicz, to play a joke on him, kicked away a support to the bench and caused the sleeper to fall. Mehil-itz took the joke in good part, adjusted the support and lay down a second time. He had just entered dreamland when he was again rudely interrupted in the same manner as before. This caused his ire to rise and he drew off and let Clementicz have a blow on the nose. The two men then closed in deadly combat, and the crowd sur-rounded them, when suddenly Mehilitz called out, "I am killed, I am stabbed." Clementicz disappeared in the crowd, and although the officers were at the place but a few seconds later, he could not be found. Mehilitz was taken to the hospital with a wound two inches in length in his abdomen. But it was ascertained that his injuries were not of a fatal nature and he did not re-quire to remain there. He has been treated every third day at the hospital

The police watched the lodging house where Clementicz had his room day and night for some time, until they finally concluded that he had left town. He came back to the city on Tuesday night and went over to his room. Some friend of Mehilitz who saw him went over to the sheriff's office and notified the officers there that he could be found. Daly, Pickel and McGuinness accordingly went over to the place. McGuinness remained on the outside while Daly and Pickel went in to make inquiries. Daly asked if Clementicz was there, when they all answered that he was not. Some one said he had been there the night be-fore, but had gone away. Just then Clementicz, who was one of the party, and who hoped to escape recognition, started to leave the house, when Daly, knowing him from a photograph he had seen, placed him under arrest.

He was arraigned in police court yes-terday, when he pleaded net guilty. He is defended by Attorney Kelly. The case was fixed for next Monday et le o'clock, and the prisoner was allowed bail at 1500, which was not produced. The lodging house keeper and in-mates ought to be arrested for keeping

AT THE MARGARET.

Main street-King's?

A Good Production Will be Well Presented.

The next attraction at the Margaret will be the perennial success, "in Old Kentucky," which will be presented here by the original company and with complete and new outfit of scenery gotten up by Manager Jacob Litt for this season's tour. The spirited horse race, the brass band and unique danc-ing of the now famous little pickarinnies, and the many other novel and en-tertaining features, will be remembered y all who have seen this popular play. The story of "In Old Kentucky" concorns the fortunes of an interesting group of people representative of the mountain and blue grass region of Kentucky. The lonely, half-savage life of the mountaineers, with their strong loves and stronger hates, their bitter feuds, rivaling in vindictiveness the Corsican vendetta, yet elevated above blood-thirstiness by a sense of religious duty, is clearly set forth and seems, it is said, all the more unique and strange in contrast with the peaceful, pastoral characteristics of the blue grass country. Numerous opportunities are given for the display of the strongest pas-sions. About the fortunes of the hero -a handsome, chivairous young Ken-tuckian, is woven a web of love, treachcry, hate and revenge, from which es-cape seems impossible. There is the ever fascinating story of the man whose part is shadowed by a great crime and whose after life is one great struggle to evade the Nemesis who pursued him. Many scenes characteristic of Ken-tucky life are introduced, genuine school from the plantation-the play. the frolle, the music of the darkles after the day's work is done; the throng, the excitement and the acclaim that attend the close finish of a famous race, which, by the way, is represented in an entirely different manner from iny other race known to the stage.

The Doctor Gives a Sketch of His History Which Will Be of Interest to Many Friends Who Know Him.

A Standard reporter, in conversation with Coroner Hardenbrook yesterday. was asked by the dector the day of the month. On being told that it was the 13th of October, the doctor said, "Well, sir, this is the 65th anniversary of my birth, and I was almost forgetting it. For first-class sign writing go to Mc-I shall have to start in at once to celebrate. In view of the fact that Dr. Hardenbrook was one of the earliest settlers in this community the reporter thought that a few facts concerning the genial doctor, whom every one knows so well, would be appropriate and of interest to the public. The doctor was according-ly plied with a number of questions, but he did not warm up to the subject but he did not warm up to the subject until the reporter stated that he had heard the doctor was a Cornishman This met with an emphatic denial, and the doctor proceeded as follows:

"I was born in Richland county, Ohio 65 years ago to-day, although I have not got a distinct remembrance of the n. I am what you may call a Irish-American. My mother was a Kelly and my father came from Scotiand. When the Hardenbrooks came to this country they settled in New Jersey. Father then went to Virginia and afterwards moved to Ohio, where I was born. The family among the oldest pioneers of Ohio. Father moved the family to Monmouth. Ill., in '49. At Monmouth I learned the drug business with William F. Smith, father of L. G. Smith of this city. That was before L. G. came to the country. I graduated in medicine there and went into partnership with Dr. William M. Huson, with whom I practiced for three years. I went to San Antonio and Galveston, Texas, in '56, and remained there one season, when I came up to the Indian Territory. I was in Fort Gibson when Buchanan was elected president. I was there a was elected president. I was there a short time, when I came back home to illinois. In the spring of '57 I went to Missouri, where I practiced in part-nership with Dr. W. Murphy. I was married there and remained till the spring of '62, when I got a lieutenancy commission and served as surgeon in the union army for one year. I saw Landing, in both of which General Grant was in cammond. In the spring of '63 I came to Montana and was all through the Alder gulch mining excite-ment. I went to Utah in 1870. From there I went to Idaho. I returned to Montana in '82 and I have been here ever since. I practiced medicine in this town during the first seven years of its existence, and since then I have been on the wing prospecting."

Dr. Hardenbrook has been the core ner here for five years. He and his estimable wife, who is about two months younger than the doctor, live at No. 219 West Third street. Their family consists of two daughters, Mrs. J. R. Toole and Mrs. T. J. McKenzie, of this city.

Something About the Quaint Corners of the Metropolis. Greig has a second-hand shotgun

From the London Mail. The alleys, courts and yards by which the city of London is honey-combed are getting every day scarcer. These tributaries of our streets are being gradually divested of their original garments, giving way to more ha bitable edifices which the hand of progress and the law of sanitation demands. Yet we cannot forget that with these byways and all-ys some o our most interesting history is closely connected. Here societies, Jacobite and other, met, essayists studied and plots were hatched. Was it not in Bolt court, Fleet street, that Dr. John son lived and expounded? In Shire lane was that den of iniquity where the renowned Jack Sheppard schemed and escaped so many times by the sub-terraneous passages in the "Bible" public house which led to Bell yard, and the old associations of Shoe lane are still rife with some of our olde citizens. It was near Shoe lane that the Conduit stood, where in 1458 a great students' riot took place, but were drivback to their respective inns archers.

At No. 5il East Front street last evening Judge Donoghue joined to-gether in wedlock D. A. McDonald and At the end of Shoe lane stood the at the child of Shoe lane stood the pillory, and near there one of Cax-ton's disciples, De Wordes, published his collection of Christmas carols, which are used to this day at Oxford. A good many disciples of Caxton, bymorning for a two weeks' visit with her sister, Mrs. Williams, at Victor, in the Bitter Root valley. the-by, still cling to this neighborhood. It was also in Shoe lane where the Cogers' Discussion society met. By a narrow turning on the west side of the lane we enter Gunpowder allew, where Lovelace, the cavailer poet, after many trials, died in destitution. Lifmany trials, died in destitution. Lil-ley, the astrologer and fortune teller, also inhabited the alley, and one stormy night, along with David Ram-sey, dug for buried treasure in the closters of Westminster. Passing up the north side of Fleet street, we have James Casey was yesterday tried be-fore Judge Donoghue for disturbing the peace. The evidence was not strong against him and he was dis-Crane court, where the Royal society met after leaving Gresham college in 1710, and where also was the meeting place of the Scottish society. Almost next door we have Red Lion court, so closely connected with Dr. Johnson and Wines Office court, which is supposed to have derived its name from the fact that licenses to sell wine were formerly is sued in the court. The names of a number of these old alleys have been altered in the reconstruction. For instance, Hare alley is now Hare court, where the "lord of misrule" of the Templars collided one night with the lord mayor, the former having refused to take his hat off the mayor. Halberds flew around the former, and his subjects were roundly beaten. In Felter lane once stood Three Leg alley, where Flaxman, the miniature painter of Charles II.'s time, lived. In Bowling Pin alley, Bream buildings, Chancery lane, the mischlewill sell their entire stock of men's buildings. Chancery lane, the mischle-elothing, underwear and shoes at cut vous mistress of the duke of York wrote her memoirs, 10,000 copies of which were burned on condition that she had an annuity of £400 granted her.

Quite a number of the old alleys have disappeared altogether—Harp alley, off Shoe lane; Ram alley, now Hare place; Jackanapes alley, and the alleys in St. Giles' parish, which were noted as being hotbeds of plague.

Around Drury lane we have some quaint and almost, one might say, beauutiful examples of the old residential byways, but, from a sanitary point of view, they are on the list for demoli-White Horse yard is one of the best. A narrow, squalid passage, with quaint old shop frontages, all closed, one can hardly imagine that this was once a most fashicnable locality, and it is only a pity that it should have been allowed to get into the state of filth it now is in. Nag's Head yard is another fine specimen, but, like its neighbor, has met the same fate. There also is Maypole alley and several others. In fact, around Drury lane is simply a network of alleys. Off the Strand there are one or two, but they are nearly all rebuilt.

The passage leading down by Terry's theater is a very effective one, espe-cially at night, when the fantastic lights and shades of the little theatrical oups, finished with their evening's work, are busily exchanging "Good the tired stage door keeper.
